WE, THE CLASS OF 1992, DEDICATE OUR LOG TO MAYOR JAMES E. MILANO

For twenty years Mayor James E. Milano has presided over the city of Melrose and has had an incredible impact upon our community. Over the years he has seen many good times and a few bad, but has handled them all with the composure and determination that have allowed him to be our pride as Mayor. What would seem to be an eternity in our lifetimes was just a flash in his life. He has brought joy into the lives of many students at Melrose High, and has been there when we needed him and supported us in all aspects of life in and out of our school. We will miss his warm smile and hope that his life will continue to flourish. We also wish that he remembers the students of Melrose High acknowledge his contibutions to our community, and that he will always be a big part of our high school memories.

ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS

The students who participate in the sports program at MHS must be truly dedicated to their sport. They put in long, grueling hours, perfecting plays or practicing jumpshots. The athletes who play a fall sport must experience the pleasure of playing for five to six hours in ninety-plus degree weather (otherwise known as Double Sessions). However, ask any Melrose High School athlete and they will say all the hard work is worth it. Just look around at a Melrose Varsity Boys Basketball game and one will see how the excitement transfers from the team to the fans and vice versa. The enthusiasm and spirit in the crowd make the athletes proud to be a student/athlete at MHS.

Furthermore, MHS sports serve different purposes for different students. Some students, who do very well, consider their sport to be an integral part of their futures. Others just need an activity that helps them exercise and relieve stress after a long day at school. Whatever the reasons, there is no denying that high school sports are an important part of almost every student's life at MHS. Even students who do not play a sport can be part of a team, through manager, statistician, waterperson or fan.

Some memories from the 1991 sports season at MHS are: the Melrose/Malden football game, the Volleyball team making the tournament, the Boys' Soccer team beating Wakefield and the Field Hockey team beating Watertown and their 77-game winning streak. Oh, and of course, the Golf team, but, what more can be said?

Raiders With Rackets

Tennis is a game that requires great skill and coordination. And although the game is played either with two opposing players (singles) or two pairs of players (doubles), the boys' tennis team proved that team spirit is indeed an important part of the game. The 1991 season had thirteen students participating, and with only two seniors leaving, next year promises to be a great one. The overall season was good this year. The players, supported by Mother Nature and coached by Peter Lund, enjoyed two 5-"love" wins over both Woburn and Watertown. The team did suffer some "disappointing losses", notes Coach Lund, "but all in all it was a pretty good season."

Led by Captain Mark Matton, the team won five matches in all and cheered juniors Nate Brodeur and Jesse Juliano on as the two were chosen as second team doubles in the League All-Stars. Matton remarks that this was the "highlight of the season." Other junior letter winners were Brian Boyle, Oliver Marcon, and Dominic Rinaldi.

Swing Into Action

Exactly what makes up a girls' tennis team? Would you consider it to be a group of girls with strong backhands and excellent serves? Or a lot of positive attitude and determination on the court? Take these qualities, and add terrific team spirit, and you get this year's team.

At the start of the season, there was a question as to whether or not there would be a coach. Luckily, Mr. Coughlin came through for the girls and had a "fabulous" year of coaching. This dilemma only added to the slow start of the season. According to Coach Coughlin, "the biggest problem . . . [was] that half of the girls [hadn't] ever played before, and they only [had] nine matches, not counting playoffs, so where they didn't know what to expect, the season got off to a slow start." However, once over the pre-season jitters, the girls went out onto the court full of confidence and ready to take on a challenge or two.

Katie Bagley ('91), the team captain, was faced with a large amount of responsibility and displayed excellent leadership. A very challenging aspect of her role was having to go up against a number of highly ranked players. Her best match was at Burlington, where she lost her first set to a strong player but made a comeback, winning the next two sets.

Along with Katie, other key players this year were juniors Michelle Larkin, Wendy Nealon, Karen Driscoll, and Alison Roselli. Nealon had already earned a firm standing on the team and continued to play her best, while Larkin, who just recently moved here from Ireland, had an outstanding first year.

Also new to the team this year were freshman Alison Casey and sophomore Kerry Todisco, who both showed outstanding potential in the game of tennis.

The girls ended their season with a record of 6 wins and 7 losses. Because of the girls' excellent attitudes and high spirits, the season turned out to be a very successful one. Whether they were playing singles or doubles, they were always playing as a team.

Seniors Katie Bagley, Erica Moretti, Patty Santagate and Liz Vagianos all wish good luck to the rest of the team in the years to come.

"We played our best, but unfortunately it wasn't enough."

Above right: "I'm gonna get you out," sneers Jim Murphy, confident that he is about to close out the inning.

"These are the times that try men's souls." That summed up the disappointing 1991 baseball season, according to Coach John Brickley. Although it was a tough year for the team as a whole, individual strengths were not overlooked. Captain and returning right handed pitcher, Jim Murphy, had a brilliant season. He was complemented perfectly by another right handed pitcher, John Griffith, who was selected as a Middlesex League All-Star, along with Craig Muse in left field.

The season did feature a few solid victories like the 24-0 blowout of Watertown early in the season. This game highlighted all the strengths that the team possessed, including its offensive power and stingy defense. The team put forth a valiant effort throughout the season, although it did not show up on their record. With the addition of some talented junior varsity players and the return of the "seasoned" varsity veterans, Melrose can expect some improved results in the year to come.

Home Sweet Home

The last crack of the bat signals the end of another softball season, and this year it was a winning one. The team had a great time, but in the meantime worked very hard.

The team had practices daily for an hour and a half with "a lot of running," according to J. Guiry. They were not exactly enjoyable, but the work paid off. This year's record was 11-9, a great leap from last year. The dramatic improvement was led by Coach Don MacLeod and co-captains Denise Giordano and Gina Helein.

The Red Sox lost to the Yankees on a fluke hit to right field in the final game of the 1949 season. So too the 1991 Melrose Red Raiders lost the chance to be in the state finals by a single hit. The heart-breaking loss was to Stoneham, where Melrose lost 5-4, without the hit that would have won the game. This loss reflected the team's weakness—hitting. But there were many other strengths present to offset this, such as teamwork, defense, and pitching. Particularly key to pitching success was Melanie Crawford.

Everyone's individual strengths came together in the game against Woburn. Melrose was down at the bottom of the seventh inning. Giordano was up at bat. The pitch was thrown. Giordano patiently watched it . . . and . . . whack! The hit won the game 5-4.

Though the team did not make it to the finals, their achievements did not go unnoticed. Four of the members were named as honorable mentions to the all-star softball team.

On The Right Track

"We tried really hard, but they always seemed to run a little faster."

Top Right: "I think I can, I think I can . . ." Justin Maietta tells himself.

Above: Bill Porter teases the other runners, letting them believe that they have a shot at victory.

Although the season's record of two wins and seven losses to outsiders may seem disappointing, to the track team it was on the contrary. This year an exceedingly large team met for practice daily, without the usual complaints or excuses. Under the encouraging and the strong leadership of co-captain Daniel Foreman and Daniel Zarella and coach Jim Morris, this team united and strove to achieve excellence for themselves individually but foremost as a team. Discarding the usual distinctions between freshmen and seniors, this team defied convention and acted as a team of equals.

They defeated their league rival, Wakefield, over whom they prevailed in the javelin and 100 meters and earned a place in the mile and the two mile. Remaining true to optimism and team spirit, they did not become discouraged or become pessimistic even though they faced extremely competitive meets such as Lexington where they lost by a narrow margin. In fact, they only exerted more energy and bouyant spirit.

Although the team lost ten seniors, next year it should not be of major consequence. The team will be composed of an extraordinary amount of seniors, including Tim Hogan, Bill Porter, Dave Jones and Doug Rotundi. Also there to help carry the team to victory is underclassman Steve Beardsley, a formidable opponent in the long distance team.

Regardless of the scoreboards, the team was victorious this season. They rose and fell together as a team. Next year, while striving to improve their record, they hope to establish the same kind of unity they had this year. With that, and our support, they should accomplish all of their goals.

Life In The Fast Lane

"Practice makes perfect" was the attitude of the hard-working and constantly improving girl's spring track team. With the addition of Mr. Porter to their coaching staff, the girls worked hard to improve the team's record, as well as achieve their own personal bests.

Led by co-captains Jeanne McCarthy and Jen Peters, the team consisted of underclassmen eager to gain experience as athletes, as well as upperclassmen who led the others with spirit and knowledge.

A strong asset to the team was the 4 x 400 relay team of Jen Peters, Christine Maffeo, Becky Anderson, and Sandra Pavao. The team could always count on these four to bring back a victory.

This year's highlights were the victory against Watertown, a team who has been competitive with Melrose for years, and the neck-and-neck meet against Wakefield. Each girl put her strongest effort into every race against the Wakefield team, and the result was a close second. Nevertheless, the team was thrilled with their success and improvement.

The team remembers "sit on your duffets" and "running around in circles!" The girls would especially like to thank Coach Porter for his enthusiasm and positive outlook. With the returning underclassmen, the team will build and the improving record will speak for itself in the years to come.

The Elite Club

The '91 golf team consisted primarily of experienced seniors as well as some distinguished underclassmen who contributed to the teams successful season. Led by captain and Middlesex League Player of the year Nate Brodeur, the team worked well together and everyone did their part individually. The team more than made up for their disappointing loss to Lexington, who they played in less than favorable weather conditions, by coming back to defeat Burlington, one of the toughest teams in the Middlesex League. The team's high point was a victory over Woburn who traditionally has been a strong team.

An important factor in the team's productive season were the accomplishments of Steven Healey, a freshman. Healey's teammates recognized his hard work as he moved up early in the season to a starting position. Greater numbers of fans than ever before attended the matches and cheered Melrose on to victory. At the finish of the season, Melrose tied for the Middlesex League Championship with Woburn.

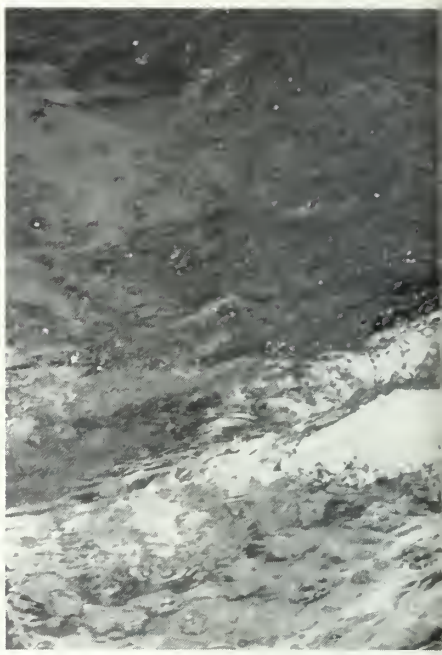
Wet and wild



On your mark . . . get set . . . go!" The earsplitting shot of the starter's gun cut across the pool. With a giant splash, the race began.

This year, the team proved that winning is not the most important ingredient for a successful season. Still a young team, the girls are in the midst of their rebuilding years. "Though the talent was there, we concentrated more on team unity rather than individual strengths and weaknesses," revealed co-captains Elizabeth Donohue and Lindsey Herrick. The team managed to pull several surprises, however. In the meet at Woburn, the team was not expected to be rewarded with a victory. But with ambition and team spirit, the girls triumphed in the last relay. Reflecting on the overall fun-filled year, the team hopes to maintain their spirit and enthusiasm while heightening the performance level for the seasons to come.

Among the highlights of the year were: psych-signs, toilet papering, pasta parties at Betty's and Missy's, sleepover at Lindsey's, and underwater photos. The team remembers: Go hard or go home . . . (see you on the bus!), Melrose, melrose, Sweet Melissa, and the Rachelle-stroke. The captains would like to thank Lauren and Al for decorating the lockers and Coach Whitworth for a spirited season.

Having recovered from last year's injuries, the M.H.S. Cross Country Team concluded their season with a much improved record. Under the strong leadership of Co-Captains and Middlesex All-Stars Bill Porter and Dave Jones, the team was undefeated at their hilly, home terrain of Mount Hood. In recognition of completing the rugged course in under eighteen and a half minutes, both captains, senior Ben Pease, and junior Bryan Walsh, all earned a spot in the exclusive 18:30 Club.

Also contributing to the Raiders successful season were seniors Tim Hogan, Doug Rotundi, and Ben Chan, along with juniors Patrick Lynch and Steve Beardsley, and sophomore Greg Huntley. The biggest surprise of the season was freshman Jim O'Malley who was drafted up to varsity after doing an exceptional job on the JV team.

Bill Porter ended his final season on the Raider Cross Country Team with the title of Middlesex League Champion and placed third in the Eastern Massachusetts State Championships. The team, overall, placed tenth in EMASS which is the best they have ever done thanks to the dedication of the runners and the outstanding coaching from Mr. Allison and Mr. Woodbrown.

Over the river and through the woods

"Oh no, not Billy Goat!" Although the girls' cross-country team had a somewhat unsuccessful season this year, it was still as fun and exciting as usual. Unfortunately, many of the runners had injuries which prevented any meets being won. However, each runner was able to reach their own personal goals and form friendships with their teammates.

Starting in late August, the team began to practice their routines, each about 2-4 miles long, around Melrose and Wakefield. They also worked on Melrose High's own cross-country route at Mount Hood, where all the home meets take place.

Headed up by co-captains Aimee Dion (a senior) and Jenna Liberman (a junior), the team was coached by Mr. Alison and Mr. Woodbrown. "We had a lot of injuries that really hurt us," said Christine Maffeo, a junior who had placed first for Melrose many times, "but we all worked hard." Beyong the shinsplints and the tendonitis, the team did have some good times. They will remember "Where's Waldo?" and "First five minutes, Meghan!"

Many underclassmen joined this season, which will help build a strong team in the years to come. "We only had one senior this year, half of us were still learning," says co-captain Jenna Liberman, "but everyone learned a lot." So, this year provided good instruction and experience for the runners, and in the years to come there will be many meets won. "Anyone can be a cross-country runner, but only certain people can stick with it," remarks Coach Alison. And this team will stick with it.

Psyche up 'n touch down

As the season began, the team took the losses of Jim Murphy, Andy McNeilly, and Howy Eddy in stride. Although fans were worried about Matt Dancewicz's inexperience at quarter back, the Raiders were not. As senior Marc Pezzuto said, "We had confidence in him. The fundamentals were there and we just worked from there." Dancewicz had a few difficulties early in the season, but as his confidence built, he filled in the role of starter with ease.

The season opened on a good note: the team played well against school rival Malden, who ranked first in another division. Then came the first home game. The football team, as well as the students were overjoyed about the reinstatement of Friday night games. The lights flickered on for the first time in over a year, as the crowd went wild. These elements, combined with a determined, energetic team, led to a victory over Watertown. Unfortunately, the rest of the season did not turn out the way the team expected. The chemistry that bonded the team together never really gelled, regardless of the outstanding efforts of Marc Pezzuto, Peter Christopher, Captain John Bernadakis, Juniors Justin Maietta and Matt Dancewicz and the capable leadership of Coach MacPherson. The team lost to Burlington and Belmont, games that should have been easy triumphs. Eventually the record started to turn around, but the season was already over for the Raiders.

Serve it up!

If you had asked someone before the 91 Volleyball season, how the team would do, the answer would not have been positive. Most people would not even have predicted a winning record, but the team proved all the skeptics wrong. The team ended with a 10-6 record which was good enough to enter them into the state tournament.

The first game was against South Boston, which Melrose won easily. Next Melrose played Arlington.

Even though Melrose lost, the game was one of their finest. It showcased the considerable talent of captains Jen Anderson and Alexis Mastronardi. The team work was supported by seniors- Kathyrn Henderson, Jen Joyce, Amanda McCarthy, and Maria Scaramozza. They were backed up by Juniors Michelle Cirrone, Jen Guiry, and Sophomore Adrian Beshong. According to Kathryn Henderson, the team's strong point was that they had "a lot of height, which led us to become a good hitting and blocking team." Alexis Mastronardi and Michelle Cirrone were named to the All-Star team.

Set on a goal

"Never forget the Watertown game!"

Watertown, need we say more? What started out as a frustrating season ended up as memorable as ever.

Senior captain Sara Dolan, kept the team's spirit alive and helped in making the season one of the best yet. With senior goalie Lisa Nelson always on top of the game, the number of saves continued to show the strength of this years team.

Breaking Watertown's 77-game winning streak highlighted the entire season. Having won the last three Division 2 state titles, Watertown left Melrose not knowing what had hit them. It was reality- Melrose was a great team with the power and determination to win. The feeling of pride was seen on the face of every player, along with Coach Jan Johnston. Somehow, it no longer mattered if they ever won another game. The game-winning goal was scored by Freshman Heidi Stevenson, who at the beginning of the season appeared as if out of nowhere. Junior Becky Anderson also proved to be an extremely important player in the game. Both Anderson and Stephanie Roche's performance on the field led them in becoming state All Stars.

Together as a team, everyone approached the games with an optimistic outlook. Working together both as a team and as great friends made every aspect of the game fun and naturally brought forth a tremendous amound of effort.

"Socc" it to 'em

Well, we did win three games . . . " Once again, the boys' soccer team have swallowed their pride and admitted to the defeat of a losing season. From the hottest days of double sessions, when they sweated under the fierce sun, preparing for the upcoming season, to the last game, when they froze during their efforts to earn a fourth win, the team busted a gut trying to prove to their fellow athletes that they were not a team to be laughed at. Even in spite of the dismal record, Coach Hart reassured the team that they were getting better - that even though they were losing, the team could consider some of the losses as victories. Greg Puleo agrees: "We're building a program."

A definite highlight of the season was the win over the team's number-one rival, Wakefield. The team pulled out the strongest game of the season, and showed the league that even Melrose, with its shaky past, could beat an established team. Another highlight was the selection of stopper Olivier Marcon to the All-Star team.

Memories: Coach Stewart's green warm-up suit; "T's" taxi; Joyce, can I have a ride?; Tony's mini-chainsaw; Garfi's busted nose; bus rides with fiels hockey; Etna's mother jokes; Synnott's yellow cards; Knoll is condemned; and the most rolls of toilet paper ever seen on anyone's house - 37 at Frank Tenaglia's.

Will they ever have a field? Will they ever have a night game? Will they ever get respect? Tune in next season.

"If We Remember How Tough Our League Is And How Hard We Played, We Have No Regrets."

Kicked into victory

"We're improving with age." Such was the concensus of the members of the girls' soccer team. This five year old program was not expected to do well this season; in fact, opponents considered them " an easy win." But, in spite of the youth of the of the team, they had a fairly successful season.

Tri-Captains Deanna Gignac, Wendy Nealon, and Carrie Sherman helped keep morale up, and it paid off. Even though a knee injury kept her off the field for the better part of the season, Sherman was still seen on the sidelines, cheering on her team.

A lot of solid games were played, with close scores. The biggest win was over Stoneham, a seven to two trouncing. Other wins were not so dramatic, but every victory is appreciated no matter what the score.

A highlight of the season was the selection of junior Melissa Cuppernell and freshman Wendy Schreiber to the League All-Star team.

Coach Winnie Cantin has this to say, "A good team is made up of a number of leaders, each with her own area of independent leadership. I'm looking forward to your future successes."

Loud and clear

"Let's get a little bit rowdy!" The trial return of Friday night football games let the cheerleaders show their stuff. Besides performing at games, they also worked hard at "endless" competition practices, perfecting their stunts (calm down, Mrs. Shea!). Cheese curls and popcorn kept up their stamina as the girls stocked up on TP-ing supplies at Purity Supreme, ready to show their support for the team. Even freezing at Stoneham, the cheerleaders kept on smiling, because they knew that they would be able to ride home in the vans ("Is this equipped with a potty?"). Quote of the year: "Thanks, they're new!"

Shout it out

Although the soccer team did not have a stellar season, the cheerleaders helped to keep up team spirit, and the unified brawl at Stoneham proved that they had succeeded. Extra practices showed the girls' determination to perform well as a team. And thanks to Rachael's whistle, they were all able to keep in time to the dance with no counts. Newly-licensed captains Rachael and Gina were excellent drivers for the TP-ing run: "What brick wall?" They'd like to say: Listen, Babe; Good Luck NC, RP, KJ, CO, KS, CR, MR, ES, and KG - we'll miss you!

Say it with moves

Playing the only sport in the school where it is actually mandatory to fight, the wrestling team enjoyed yet another exciting year. Headed by tri-captains Charles Tedeschi (a junior), Greg Puleo and Daniel Schumaker (seniors), the team suffered some disappointing losses, but two games (against Lexington and Salem) resulted in victories for Melrose.

The seemingly endless drills and practices, coached by Mr. John Puleo and Mr. Frank Smith, paid off in many of the meets. In sectionals, Charlie Tedeschi placed third, as the other captains Puleo and Schumaker placed third in leagues. Another junior, Matt Murphy, placed third in the leagues also. In addition to these awards, the team as a whole grew and learned a lot.

The underclassmen made a good impression last season. "We have some excellent freshmen," said Puleo, "In a few years, the team will get really good." Sophomore Jacob Norman also put in "We did okay-everyone has gotten better-and will keep getting better."

The team will remember certain memories such as, "Didn't you see me . . . I was up on the roof?" and wish the best of luck to the teams in the years to come.

Tumbling to the top

Vaulting their way into the Middlesex League title, the Melrose High gymnastics team triumphed with a flawless record. This marks the team's third championship title in the past four years. Motivation and cooperation proved to be the dynamic combination that gave the team the winning edge.

"These kids worked hard for every tenth of a point," commented coach Carla McCormack. Indeed, the efforts of co-captains Alison Roselli and Karen Driscoll led the team in the league sweep. Efforts by Phyllis Joyce and juniors Kerri Todisco and Cara Catanzaro also aided Melrose in the meet against their biggest rivals, Stoneham, in the most memorable and well-deserved victory of the season.

"They're all definitely team players," said the coach. "They worked extremely hard and would put in extra hours to improve themselves." The hard work and strong efforts definitely paid off for the girls, as they were richly rewarded with success.

The captains would like to remember the sleepover at Karen's, the victory party at Alison's, the invisible five, and ice skating. They wish next year's team the best of luck and hope that they can once again capture the league title.

Set it up shoot it in

Once again the Melrose High School basketball program proved that with the proper coaching, high morale, and incredible discipline, it can turn a team with the potential to win, into a team where winning is a reality. This year with returning senior tri-captains Andy Lennon, Mike Kostur and Rob LaGrega, the team has the chance to mold the less experienced into extremely good basketball players, some of which would become standouts. Lennon and Kostur provided the leadership along with extrodinary play that deserves priase. Rob LaGrega assisted the team with his accurate passing and incredible outside shot. Joe Mastrangelo helped the team by adding not only his aggressive style of play, but his experience in key situations.

Any fan realized that seniors are not the only ones that help the team to win. Junior starters are needed, and are often hard to come by. This year Justin Maietta gave the team an incredible boost at the point-guard spot. But starters obviously can not make up the whole team. A good part of this team success can be attributed to the fine back up play of the bench. Returning seniors Tom Luciano, Teddy Hurley, and Mark Rowe were a big part of the games. But again games may not have been won if it was not for the play of underclassmen with good basketball experience. Jason Webb and Steven Anthes were two of the key underclassmen players to come off the bench and provide the support needed by the team.

There were many exciting close games this season, most of which Melrose won. It took the fine play of the veterans in crunch time to pull them out, and they deserve a lot of credit for the wins. Probably the most exciting game of the year was Melrose's overtime victory against Belmont. An incredible comeback spurred by the take-charge play of tri-captain Andy Lennon.

This year was host to the most supportive fans Melrose has ever known. From the opening tap to the final buzzer, the fans were involved in every play. They were a big part in making this season something special.

Oh, Shoot!

The 1991-1992 Girls' Basketball team had an outstanding season. Finishing the regular season with an outstanding record, the girls' advanced to the state tournament.

Hard work and dedication were the two major factors that led to the team's success. Team captains Alexis Mastronardi and Tammy DiGregorio provided the necessary leadership for the team. Although these two players were the only seniors, the younger players had the experience needed to win. Contributing juniors were Jenn Guiry, Becky Anderson, Michelle Cirrone, Kim Walsh, Michelle "Petey" Hynds, and Danielle Beshong. Sophmores include Rene Federico, Adrian Beshong, and Nicole Troy. The only freshman on this year's team was Gina Luciano.

This year's success started with an impressive and exciting win over Belmont. From there, the girls went on an eight game winning streak. Injuries slowed the team down for a while, but they were able to pull themselves together. This year, four Melrose players were named to the Middlesex League All-Star team. This is an obvious result of the team's success. Tammy DiGregorio and Alexis Mastronardi made the first team, while Jenn Guiry and Becky Anderson were named to the second team. Head coach was selected to coach in the All-Star Game.

Although the season ended with a disappointing loss to undefeated Wakefield, the girls' tied the record set in 1978 for the most games won by a Melrose Girls' Basketball team. The captains feel that the good times the team shared are as important as the success the team enjoyed.

The memories include: The Nip/Duck Crew and Alumnai, F.A.W.T.W., finding a line, The Big Ragu, Belmont (42-40), The Video Man, Fire extinguishers with Hawk, Toss the Foss, IT's extra strength!, Alex! and A!, The tourney.

Different strokes for different folks

The loss of star swimmer Dave Cuttino meant that Melrose would have to work a little harder this year for the league title, which was "up for grabs," according to senior captain Greg Sampson. The team this year was, for the most part, not only young, but new. The fact that by the last two meets, the Raiders had a chance to clinch first place, is impressive, considering the age of the team. Unfortunately, both meets were lost, including a close one to Reading, and Melrose had to settle for third. However, next year should be an excellent season, after all of the new talent has had a year's experience.

The season ended with the Middlesex League meet, where Stan Doerrer made his impressive starting jump. Sophomore Paul Kroon, junior John Garipay and senior Greg Sampson performed quite well at the League meet. These three, along with Jason Shamberger, "a pretty impressive freshman," qualified for the Sectionals. Kroon and Garipay both earned spots on the league All-Star team, and Garipay and Sampson both qualified for the States.

After nearly a quarter-century of Coaching, Coach Robert Grant will be retiring (we think) from the boy's swimming team. Since 1969, he has been behind the team, making sure the members try their best, win or lose. He will be missed.

The Inside Track

Things began with a bang for the Indoor Track team. Hard work and high spirits kept the runners competitive in the Middlesex League. However, since the team consisted of primarily underclassmen, it needed not only experience but also greater participation in order to win meets.

Under the leadership of coaches Bob Maccini and Bob Coughlin, the boys were victorious against the rival team, Watertown. The girls came within points of winning, but simply did not have enough people to combat the opponents. Strong performances were consistantly made by captains Bill Porter, Tim Hogan, Sara Dolan and Katherine Daniels, as well as Dave Jones, Ben Pease, Sandy Pavao, and Christine Maffeo. First-year runners Jim O'Malley, Ryan Kerr, Kathy Arria, and Lisa Hiland were promising additions to the team.

While practices in the cold winter weather were often grueling, the team was rewarded with improvement as well as personal satisfaction. Captain Bill Porter finished. Becky Hale placed first in the hurdles at the freshman-sophomore meet at M.I.T.

The icing on the skates

Twice a week, the dedicated fans of the Melrose Varsity Hockey Team bear the cold of the arena to cheer their team on to victory. As the players glide effortlessly across the ice during pre-game, their nervous excitement seems to be present in the hearts of the fans as well.

To prepare for these moments, the Raiders have rigorous everyday practices that consist of grueling drills, exercises, and scrimmages that leave the coach and team tired and sore. However, when the game and the cheering begin, everyone realizes that their hard work and sacrifice has paid off.

Although some of the starting players returned to the team for their third year, all of their talent and skill did not make them eligible to compete in the tournament at the end of the season. However, their wins did outnumber their losses and the team had a great time all winter.

ONE . . .

One might think that hockey players cannot appreciate the support of their fans, but when our MHS cheerleaders give it their best, the crowd joins in and the players respond. Throughout the ups and downs of the hockey season, the cheerleaders are always there with words of support. Together, sharing both triumphs and disappointments, the players and cheerleaders come together to make up a great team.

Memories: Gold shoes, smelly bus rides, bowling shirts, " Nah, I don't think so " - No Katie!, Pez on my mind?, " I'm not a senior ", frozen at Belmont, secret cheerleader food, " Hey goalie you're not a . . .", Thanks to Mrs. Skaare and goodluck to KF, MO, KJ, CB, AT, RP, KS, CH, AC, CC, & ML, and by the way, what do they say in the circle?

Above: First Row: K. Jackson, M. O'Leary, K. Farrell, M. Gillis, S. MacDonald, K. Menary, K. Salemme. Second Row: A. Crowley, M. Linnehan, C. Bruni, A. Taber, R. Pascuccio, C. Hubbard. Missing: C. Catantaro

Right: Kari Jackson and Amanda Crowley clap in unison in an attempt to keep warm at a hockey game.

Top: "If you only knew how cold we are!" think Megan O'Leary, Amanda Crowley and Molly Linnehan

. . . WE ARE THE RAIDERS

According to senior Jen Oxford, "the basketball team really supported its cheerleaders this season." They were in turn rewarded for their unfailing support with gifts of food and drinks at away games, donated by "secret" cheerleaders.

The girls practiced rigorous and intense routines and perservered despite any doubts of others and in spite of the many bruises acquired during mishaps at practice. They also faced the problem of not having enough space to practice in or when they did, it was inadequate for their moves and the number of girls. All of their efforts paid off, however, when they performed exeptionally well at their exhibition with the hockey cheerleaders, totally 29 girls. Many students turned up in support of this event, including the hockey and basketball teams, which perhaps inspired the tremendous execution of their routine.

Some memories include: Brunch with basketball boys, "let's mingle", sharing pizza with the Winchestor God, exhibition . . . nice bowling shirts, Belmont OT. Thanks Mrs. Shea for all of your support.

SAY "CHEESE"

"What am I supposed to put here?" "Now Bob is going to be mad because I forgot to put him in." "They're supposed to be turned today?" Writing profiles is always a hectic time. Not that it matters. Your yearbook picture did not come out the way you wanted it to, so who cares how disconnected your profile is.

You were rather upset about that picture, too. Eight different outfits, six different haristyles; nothing made any difference. The photographer tried to make you smile; you just wound up looking like you were on drugs. So to try a new approach, he made you pose differently. This time, you wound up looking like you had no neck. Finally, after the tenth try, you decided to quit. You only wish you could have a picture that actually looks like you (well, you hope that you do not look like your picture does).

Then, you had to write the words to go with it. You either could not fit in all that you wanted, or you could not think of enough to say. Once you figured out what to put in, you begin to worry again. You wondered if, twenty years from now, you might just forget what "b/7/?(c-ty)!" means. Don't worry, you will. So you squeezed everything into the space you were provided with, and just barely got is passed in on time.

But, wait! Do not forget the importance of a quote. You tried and tried to think of something good, something witty and original. But all you came up with was "PARTY!" Oh well, everything holds it own meaning. We cannot all be Longfellow.

Once you finished, you did not have to think about it until June. That is when you open up your yearbook and notice that all your friends look wonderful in their pictures and have the most intelligent quotes. Please do not scream. Yours is just as good, and I mean what I say.

STUDENT LIFE

ANYTHING GOES

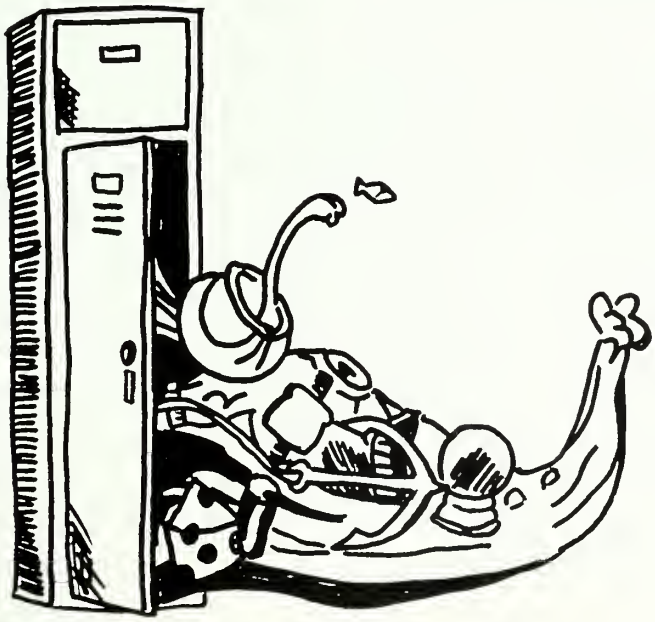
Books aside, there are many other activities influencing a young student's life. After a hard week at school everyone needs some enjoyable activity to participate in and unwind with. It's a time to put school aside and just have some well deserved fun, whether it's grabbing a pizza with the guys or just hanging around at a friend's house, it's a time to relax and loosen up.

The moments we share with our friends at dances, school club activities, and on weekends are the moments we are most likely to remember the rest of our lives. They are times we will reflect upon because it is now, in our high school years, that we experience many things for the first time. It is also the time that we make our first true friends with whom we share these experiences.

Student life is a term that refers to not only activities outside the school, but also those within the school. In fact, the most memorable activities are run through the school. They are the junior and senior proms, the Halloween dance and the Winter ball. No one will ever forget the excitement or the nerve racking moments before their first prom, or the hassle of dancing in a Halloween costume.

Student life also includes our first real outlook on life, a glimpse of the workscene. To most of us part-time jobs mean nothing more than some petty cash, but it really is a valuable learning experience.

As we look back at high school, later in life, we are not going to remember the homework and tests, rather the greatest times of our life, the times spent with close friends.



LET IT SNOW

Voices floated up the stairwell: "I can't believe I'm back in school on a Friday night - voluntarily!" "Why didn't I bring my coat - it's colder than I thought." "What do you mean, you forgot the ticket?!?" It was Friday the Thirteenth - a day that has long been held in mystical and superstitious regard. And the night of the 1991 Winter Ball.

The senior class had looked forward to this date since the Halloween Dance, described by many as "even better than the Junior Prom." Many gasps of surprise were heard as people filed into the Swallows' Nest, which this time had been transformed, complete with snow, into a quasi-ballroom.

The customary exclamations of "Oh, you look SO good!" abounded as the early arrivers milled around, snapping photos of each other. The music pulsed in the background, a mind-numbing groove of hard-core rap. Later into the night, class president Orlando Pizana made sure that everyone was on the floor to dance to his anthem, "O.P.P".

Highlights of the night included the arrival of Santa Claus, who gave everybody a chance to sit in his lap and make sure he knew just what they wanted for Christmas. And, of course, no senior function would be truly complete without a few takes of the ever-popular "Electric Slide."

Everyone had a great time, and as the evening wound down to a close, good will and cheer pervaded the atmosphere, as the Class of 1992 wished each other, "Merry Christmas."

WELCOME TO THE 1992

MINI-MAG

It all starts that fateful day in homeroom when you realize that the flyer you have just received is your ticket to ride. Crescent Auto School is back, and this time you're ready.

You arrive at Driver's Ed. a few Wednesdays later with a Pepsi in hand, eager to delve into the mysteries of the Blue Book, dying to try your hand at reading out loud (for extra credit, of course). After a mere six weeks of classwork, you are ready to enter into the experience of road lessons.

As you climb behind the wheel for the first time, you feel a surge of excitement, a thrill of power. Regardless of the fact that you revved up the engine while in "park", you are confident that you'll be allowed on the highway by the third lesson.

Finally, after many red lights run, a few cut-offs made, and lots of panicking, you are qualified to go out for your license.

Tales of horror race through your brain as you have mild strokes in the registry parking lot. What if you are asked to parallel park? On the left side of the street? What if you signal left, but turn right? What if you back into something?

"Road test people, come in!" Knees buckling, you follow your fellow sufferers into the building, clutching your precious Driver's Ed. certificate. The inspector decides that you are going to be the first to go.

"Hand signals, please!" This is it. Months of preparation may or may not be about to pay off. Slowly, you roll down your window and chant, "Left, right, slow down or stop."

And then, in a daze, you perfectly execute numerous feats of automotive expertise (more or less), and find yourself being congratulated by the inspector. You've passed! Welcome to the realm of the few, the proud - the drivers.

TUNE IN TOMORROW

Throughout these tubulent four years, it is sometimes nice to tune out for a while, and tune in to soap operas. There is nothing quite like coming home from a tough six hours of classes and settling down to a major network's afternoon offerings. You can leave the battles of high school (grades, friends, relationships, etc.) behind school walls, and watch other people battle out their lives for an hour or two.

Studies now show that students in college who watch soap operas are less likely to be homesick, and have an easier time adjusting to college life than those who do not. Tell that to your parents the next time they say that you're wasting your time! Of course, many of these parents are the ones who started us our viewing habits.

Our mothers told us to "Be quiet and go play," while they watched their favorite show to find out who killed who, if someone truly loved someone else, or if the local vamp really used to be a man. And then there were the babysitters who were obsessed with a soap and made us forgo watching "Electric Company" in favor of "General Hospital." As we got older, however, we formed our own obsessions with watching our favorite gorgeous actors (like Jack Wagner) and seeing the outcome of some melodramatic plot.

Many people find soap operas unrealistic and silly. But ever since the radio serials of the 1940's, their world has been, and always will be there for you in which to get lost. The long-lost evil twin from "As the Light Turns in the World Hospital of Love Children in Sante Fe" who was rumored to have been a terrorist on another planet may seem far-fetched, but who cares! We are being entertained.

HERE'S THE STORY . . .

Remember, if you will, the days of your youth. Every day at five o'clock you raced from your sandbox to the television, where you sat, eyes glued to channel 56. You waited anxiously for the opening chords of The Brady Bunch theme song to echo into T.V. land. You were whisked away to a world of first dates, camping trips, cheerleading try-outs, and vacation disasters. Remember the volcano that didn't work, the ice cream eating contest, Greg's beat-up convertible, Marsha's nose, the dunking machine, Sam the butcher, cousin Oliver, The Grand Canyon, and everyone's bad haircuts? We look back now and laugh but can still remember the time when these things were all that mattered.

Dylan r maybe Kelly, if you happen to be a guy) is xy. You love seeing him (or her) in a bathing it.

But the show goes beyond such petty teen-age uff. It deals with issues that would make the radys faint, like sex, drinking, and suicide. eavy topics, but ones that exist in Melrose, as every other community. So if anyone wants know why you're wasting your time on a lly soap opera, tell them that you're learning out important sociological issues.

Eleven years ago, MTV, Music Television, was created. Twenty-four hours a day, you could simply flick a switch to bring music and mayhem into your living room. For those of us without cable, there was V66 (until it was replaced one day by the Home Shopping Network, but that's another story).

Do you remember Flock of Seagulls? Devo? Or A-Ha (if you need a hint, they sang "Take On Me")? Can you hum the chorus of "Come On Eileen", or "New Moon On Monday?"

We are part of the MTV generation. Though popular music has diverged into many categories, from heavy metal ("Headbangers' Ball") to alternative ("120 Minutes"), we will always remember when it was enough to say, "I want my MTV."

WHAT ARE WE DOING TONIGHT?

It's Friday night and you're stuck in Melrose. After rearranging your Mom's spice cabinet and giving each of your goldfish a personal bath, you decide to hit a local hangout. Shouting a quick good-by to your mother, you start down the driveway, but stop, realizing you don't know where to go.

Where are the local "hangouts"? Well, it all depends on who you are and what you want to do. Should you decide that you want something to eat, a stroll down Main Street will take you from you Billy's to Papa Gino's.

Another "hangout" spot is at a Melrose sporting event. Kids attend football, basketball, and hockey games to cheer on the home team and SOCIALIZE. Victory parties may ensue.

If all this fails you, you can simply go to a friend's house. Many people may gather for a raging bash, or just a few for a cozy atmosphere.

You button up your coat and continue down the driveway. Heading nowhere in particular, you realize that it's not where you "hang", but that you have fun doing it.

WHAT PART OF THE OREO DO YOU LIKE BEST?

Everyone experiences first dates, but blind first dates are the worst. Neither person knows exactly what to expect and there are usually surprises involved, both good and bad. The following is an example of a typical blind date . . . . .

Friday

2:30 p.m. - You realize that your laundry basket is full, and all of your clothes are dirty.

3:00 p.m. - You wonder what he will look like and prepare to kill the friend who arranged the deal if he's a jerk.

4:00 p.m. - Your laundry's done - maybe it'll be okay.

4:15 p.m. - You hop into the shower and realize that your shampoo has run out, so you have to use your dad's "Head and Shoulders".

4:30 p.m. - You're drying your hair and a fuse blows.

5:00 p.m. - You're dressed and your mom makes you eat (neglecting to inform you that your dinner is full of onions).

5:30 p.m. - You go to brush your teeth and get toothpaste on your newly laundered sweater.

6:15 p.m. - He rings the doorbell.

6:16 p.m. - You open the door and he's totally gorgeous (so you stare and barely manage to utter a "hi").

6:18 p.m. - Your parents begin the Spanish Inquisition all over again: "So what do you plan on doing (with my daughter)?" What time will you be home?", etc.

6:30 p.m. - You finally get to leave. You get into his truck and you hear your skirt tear, so you tactfully untuck your shirt. Only, then your coat gets caught in the door.

7:00 p.m. - O.K. You're early for the movie. Silence. More silence.

7:20 p.m. - The movie finally starts.

7:40 p.m. - You experience 20 minutes of incessant finger drumming and "Do you want some popcorn?"

8:00 p.m. - Oh, no! You have to sit through a major sex scene! How embarrassing! You squirm until he asks you if you are okay, which startles you into spilling popcorn all over the people in front of you.

8:01 p.m. - You answer "Yes" but call him the wrong name. Oh God!

8:25 p.m. - You are out cold and snoring on his shoulder.

9:30 p.m. - You arrive home the earliest ever and he peels away before the door even shuts, leaving you to your humiliation.

O.K. My hair and makeup are done. My dress and shoes are on. I guess I'm ready to go downstairs. I slowly walk into the hall and down the stairs, hoping for the next half hour to go by quickly.

"Here goes nothing," I think as I step into the living room, which is filled with relatives. The obligatory compliments and pleas for pictures follow my entrance. I quietly submit; better to offer no resistance as the pain involved is less that way, I reason. I smile, knowing I will hate every one of the pictures. The photographers decide they want outside backgrounds, so we move out onto the porch.

Just my luck, it is a cool and windy day for the prom, and I stand smiling and shivering in an off-the-shoulder dress. I hear calls that the limo is coming as the wind shifts and blows my dress up--perfect! I run inside in embarrassment. Did I forget to mention that my father has been video-taping all the proceedings? (Including when I walked into the hall with only a shirt on--that has since been erased.)

My date bravely summons the courage to face all the cameras and relatives in my house. Flowers are exchanged and, of course, more pictures are taken. I am eventually able to talk my parents into letting us leave. The walk to the limo is safely made without my dress flying up again. Finally, I am in the limo and safe--or so I think. My father jumps into the front seat of the limo with his camcorder - unbelievable! At long last we leave my house to pick up everyone else. And, oh yeah- the prom was great.

ORGANIZATIONS

ANYTHING AND EVERYTHING

A student at MHS is given the opportunity to participate in activities of every kind. In addition to the daily grind of algebra, chemistry, and history, a student can be found attending a Mardi Gras, rehearsing for a drama production, twirling a baton, or writing a letter to a foreign diplomat. Exta-curricular activities give students a more complete high school high school experience, supplying the chance for socialization with many types of kids.

Organizations also help each student develop his or her own personality. SADD members are very concerned with problems of today's teens while the members of Project Bread give a hand in feeding the hungry. Being a part of a club or group influences a student in several different ways.

Firstly, most organizations have a specific goal towards which each member must contribute. Secondly, being a member of a club forces a student to assign priorities in his or her life and become more responsible. And thirdly, as students learn to work with other people and get to know other members, they build friendships that they may not otherwise ever had imagined if not for their showing an interest in a certain activity. The organizations at Melrose High School provide many memories which will have an impact on the rest of our lives, and which will be talked about for years to come.

Mel Rose was so excited. It had been his first day as a transfer student at Melrose High School, and he couldn't wait to go home and tell his family about his adventures. However, he was soon to find out that the two o'clock bell did not mean that the day wa over.

Mr. Hurley came over the P.A. with announcements at 1:55. "There will be an Environmental Club meeting right after school today in the resource center. Please bring any cans that you have collected throughout the school."

"Hey, that sounds like a coo club," thought Mel. His sister Melanie was away in Brazil, saving the rain forest, and he knew that she would want hin to join the Environmental Club. But that was not all tha there was to do.

"Amnesty International meets today in Room 240. A movie about capital nishment will be shown. Pase bring pens and paper to wte letters afterwards"

Mel's sister Melissa was a cbyist in Washington, D.C., ring to convince lawmakers declare the death penalty rnstitutional. "I bet that Vlissa would want me to help ol with her cause," mused Vl, and decided that perhaps hshould go to Room 240.

Applications for next year's yrbook can be picked up in ay of the offices. If you would ie to be a part of a dynamic al productive team, think about joining the LOG."

Mel had seen a copy of the LG from the previous year; it hl made him decide to tnsfer from his school in Bmuda. "Wow! I sure would lie to help out on that!" tlught Mel, and he made a mntal note to pick up an aplication.

The bell rang, and Mel set o to make the world a better pce.

SAY SOMETHING SMART

School. The very word conjures up images of books and pens, chalkboards and desks. A place to learn. From Dickens to Descartes, we have been taught facts and figures. But beyond that, we have been taught lessons far more valuble. Whether friend or foe, the people who surround us have helped shape our education in life. We have been taught to think for ourselves, and this is the most important lesson of them all: to be confident enough to say what you think.

As for the classes themselves, you might not always remember exactly how to take a derivative, but you will remember the kid who sat next to you in math class and made you get sent out of the room for laughing too hard at his jokes. You may not recall the number of chambers in a bird's heart, but you will definitely recall the time when students started fainting one after another after a particularly graphic story in biology.

And anyone who ever had to make an oral presentation in front of a class may not remember the topic of discussion, but they will remember what it took to get through it. The anxiety, the embarrassment, were horrendous. How about the time when you were reciting the Preamble to the Constitution in history class, and spoke of securing rights to "ourselves and our posterior"? These experiences may have seemed traumatic at the time, but now that we can look back and laugh, we can see that we learned more about ourselves; who we are and what we are capable of doing.

Beyond the textbook material, we gained an education in life. And that is something to be said.

"I'm not in the mood right now. I promise, I will get to it in a little while."

Does this sound familiar? Of course, it does. I believe it is fair to say that somewhere inside of everyone lies a procrastinator. We all, some more than others, put things off, and make a promise to do whatever has to be done eventually. Whether it is a household chore, a report, that college application which has been haunting you, or even an article for the yearbook, procrastination definitely takes place in all of us.

We think that by putting these tasks off momentarily, they will become easier in time. Think about it - does it really work that way? You know exactly what I'm talking about. When is the last time you put off a term paper for school? You remember, don't you? You were given a month and a half to write 1,000 words on an event in American history. You chose the Boston Tea Party, thinking it would be easy to write about a bunch of "Indians" who threw tea into Boston Harbor. So easy, in fact, that you left it until the night before it was due.

You were all ready to sit down and write when your favorite television show came across the screen. You could not bear to miss the show, so you promised yourself you would only watch that one show only, and then write the paper. Suddenly you found it was two hours later, and you were still in front of the T.V. Well, you must admit those were two hours of excellent programming.

Now you're kicking yourself. How could you have been so stupid? You had seven full weeks to write a simple paper, and now you're down to seven hours to complete what seems like the most impossible project ever. You can barely keep yours eyes open, never mind read the fine print of fifteen books. But you have no choice; you have to write something and you have to write it now. If you're lucky, your creative juices start flowing and you somehow put together a paper which isn't half bad. On the other hand, you're not always that lucky.

No matter what the outcome, one question always remains - was it worth it? Maybe you should write your next paper on procrastination.

This may be only one example, but I'm sure you get the point. Procrastination is a bad thing, but it happens to the best of us. No matter what the situation may be, you should definitely think twice before you put anything off.

It's six o'clock, time for the news report. Every student, including me, is anxiously tuned in to the T.V., waiting to see if it is really going to snow the next day.

I debate doing my homework, as by now it is 11:00 and the snow has started to lightly fall. The streets are blanketed with white, powdery snow and the streetlights show the steady rhythm of the storm. I go to bed and pray that there is no school, because no homework has been done after all.

It's now 5:00 a.m. and my mom wakes me up after about twenty minutes of absolute torture, including water and shouting. "Turn the radio on, cancellations are beginning, I have to go to work now." I have to stay awake now, just to see if I can go back to sleep.

Two hours later, every school has been announced but ours! I can't believe it. My teachers are going to kill me! Its soooo cold out! Oh well, at least the shower water is warm!

Five minutes before the first bell is about to ring, I am going out the door with a heavy heart. Well, maybe I'll listen to the radio one more time. "Okay kids last minute cancellations: Malden, Wilmington, and Melrose."

No school, and I'm already awake! It figures, I guess I can watch cartoons though. Hmmm, some poor sucker probably left for school already and has icicles attached to his head . . . . there goes one now. It's great living five minutes from school!

John twitched at his desk, anxiously awaiting his doom. His palms were drenched with sweat and he began to shake with anxiety. The teacher slowly reached into the fateful hat and selected the name of the next victim . . .

Through a cloud of tension, John heard his name echo across the room to where he sat, frozen with fear. He slowly rose to his feet, struggling to remain conscious. He wished that the brown and white tile below him would swallow him up, rescuing him from his torture.

John crossed the floor and stepped up to the podium. He clenched the wooden sides to keep his hands from shaking. He slowly opened his mouth to speak, but all that emerged was a high-pitched squeal. Smothering it with a cough, John began again. "On my summer vacation, I, um, uh . . . " He quickly shuffled through his notes in order find his place, when the cards suddenly spilled across the floor. He bent down to pick them up, but accidentally knocked the podium onto the floor, where it lay in two large splinters. By this time, the class was roaring hysterically.

The teacher sprang from the back of the room hollering for the class to quiet down. Unfortunately, the situation was too far out of hand -- John's face displayed a deep shade of red and his classmates taunted his oral presentation. He slowly walked to the back of the room, sat down at his desk, and buried his face in his hands. He wondered just how he could ever recover from this nightmare.

After six years of Spanish, Mrs. Wheeler still has to explain Greg Puleo's homework to him in English.

My radio clicks on at 7:30 a.m. It's Saturday morning, and my alarm shouldn't be on but alas, the SAT's must be taken. I roll out of bed and quickly go to the bathroom and get dressed. Appearance is not a big priority today. Following an intense search for two number two pencils with erasers, I finally get into my car, hoping for a massive traffic jam on the way to school. Unfortunately, the Fellsway is all clear. At school, I am greeted by many smiling faces who are as happy as I am to be there on a Saturday. We file in, as if to our deaths. For the next half hour we fill in our names. Then, we finally begin the test. All right, a deep breath and we open the book. AAAHHHH! What's an antonym!!! Okay, it's coming back to me, I can handle this.

Done with English and on to math. If that kid next to me doesn't stop that stupid sniffling I can not be held responsible for my actions. Back to math, what do sine and cosine mean? Oh well, I'll just skip those and go on the algebra ones. Not much better, but at least I can fake these. The proctor's voice booms out, "Time's up, put your pencils down and close your books." Everyone in the room peels himself off the ceiling and closes his book. The long task of collecting the answer sheets is finally finished. Everyone quickly exits the school, mentally reviewing all the schools that don't require SAT's.

Across the map with GAPP

Behind the doors of the customs department, the German students displayed their passports for the officials. They quickly proceeded to the baggage claim to collect the luggage they had brought for the upcoming month. Moving on towards the arrival gate, feelings of excitement rushed through the group. Most were anxious to meet their partners; some were nervous, not knowing what to expect. After all, they were going to spend the next month as exchange students in the United States.

In October, twenty German students came to Melrose with the GAPP program. Accompanied by their teacher, Frau Hadeburg Frank-Cords, the kids planned an itinerary filled with trips and events for the entire month. Among them were an excursion to New York, a meeting with Governor William Weld, and a visit to the museums and shops along the North Shore. Whether with their host families or with friends, the students were exposed to the American way of life. Football games, movies, and parties highlighted the social aspect of the exchange. At the end of the trip, the German students performed at the traditional "Hamburg Night" talent show.

The exchange seemed to pass all too quickly for the German students and their partners. Fortunately, they can look forward to meeting again in the spring, keeping the tradition of GAPP alive.

SEEN BUT NOT HEARD

"Why are the classrooms triangular?" "233-6? Oh, I thought it was 233-5!" "All my teachers hate me!" So begins freshman year. The first week is a shock, to say the least. You find yourself alone at lunch, and when you finally find your friends, you are all forced to sit at a table where ten juniors are, all giving you dirty looks. You hear Mr. Croston's warnings about tardiness, and drag all your books to each class instead of going to your locker (not that it would open, anyway). You trip and fall right into a group of very BIG seniors, and you want to go home.

As the year goes on, you discover that high school may have some good points. First of all, there are lots of clubs that you can join. Secondly, you devise ways to avoid all the scary upperclassmen in the hallways. And finally, you locate the nurse's office. That is one of the advantages that you hold over the older people. The nurse does not know you yet, so you can get away with spending a lot more time there than your "superior" high school students.

Being the youngest has other attributes as well. You are less likely to be suspended for blowing up your science lab. And if school life really gets to you, people are much more likely to understand when you lose it completely one day while switching classes. But you must be careful at this vulnerable stage. Do not let anyone sell you a "pass" for the elevator.

Once you reach sophomore year, (one year down, three [!] to go) life takes on a new meaning. You are actually OLDER than someone! It is also during this year that you discover a wonderful thing called the guidance office. It is your new found home. You can cry at your guidance counselor and he or she HAS to listen. And if there is an unpleasant class upcoming, well, gee, shouldn't you check to see what colleges might lie in your future? Go for it. By next year you will be so concerned about getting a combined total of something above 400 on your S.A.T.s, that you will not have the time. Enjoy your underclassman life for as long as you can. Trust me when I say that power will come with time.

A special thanks to the following people who have made the 1992 yearbook a success:

First and foremost, to our adviser, Mr. Gary Hart (Dad?) who is the backbone of the operation; the MHS administration and faculty, especially teachers of editors who have their classes interrupted time and again; the custodial staff, Mr. O'Hare, Mr. DellArciprete, Mr. Kennedy, and Mr. Johnson, for not leaving us out in the cold with a folder full of artwork and copy; Mrs. Taurisi for the use of the school van; Mrs. Roselli and Mrs. Dooher for driving us to Bryant; Mrs. Fisher and all the secretaries for their help; Mrs. Katz for letting us use the R.C.; Mr. Lane and Mrs. Hurley for all the sports' scoreboards; our photographer, Mr. Terry Bleiler, Mr. Tom Keeley, our Jostens' representative; Mrs. Linda Nolf, our inside rep at the Jostens' plant; Tenley and Ryan Hart for a great job on the parent messages; Mr. Phil Sanborn for our computerized stationery; Mr. Tom Humphreys for all our lists and lists and lists; Mrs. Mary "Are YOU having a nice day?" Burns, who let us use the Apples; Mr. Ted Usher for our printing; Burger King for overlooking our behavior in their playground after the Bryant workshop; Taco Bell for the large quantities of straws, ashtrays and napkins; Mrs. Hart for letting us borrow her family Friday and Sunday nights; all the editors and staffs who have done some excellent work and deserve a great book; our families for putting up with us during deadlines and once again to Mr. Hart, who was supposed to retire but just could not get enough of the class of '92. Good luck in the future and thanks for a great year (or two, or three).

Sincerely,
with nothing more to say . . .
Editor-in-Chief

Appreciation

Farewell, Ted Geisel; adioos, Dr. Seuss

By M.R. Montgomery
GLOBE STAFF

If you liked good Dr. Seuss
You read your children "Thidwick Moose"
One book, two books,
Forty-seven new books
Theodor Seuss Geisel
Lived long, wrote well
Ted is dead.
Dead is Ted.
Sad to say,
He passed away,
Late Tuesday.
At 87 in his bed.
Audrey Diamond, second wife,
Shared the last years of Theo's life
Wed a Miss Palmer in '27,
She went to heaven in '67
Wrote "500 Hats ..." in '37
"McElligot's Pool" in '47,
Put a hat on a cat in '57,
Too much seven!
"Cat in the Hat" made it plain,
That was the end of "Dick and Jane"
Teaching reading was his wish
"One Fish Two Fish Red Fish Blue Fish."
(That's a deliberate comma drop, he put some back in "Hop on Pop.")
A hundred million books he sold
Including one on growing old.
Not so old he was a cynic,
But how he loathed the Golden Years Clinic!
His favorite book was about the Lorax
A creature with a fuzzy thorax
(Also fuzzy feet and knees)
The Lorax loved the truffula trees
The truffula trees were all chopped down,
Where Geisel lived, they mowed 'em down.
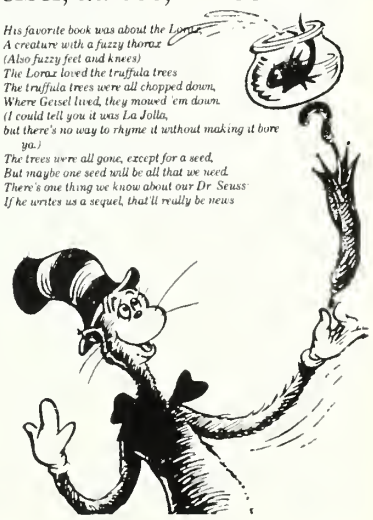
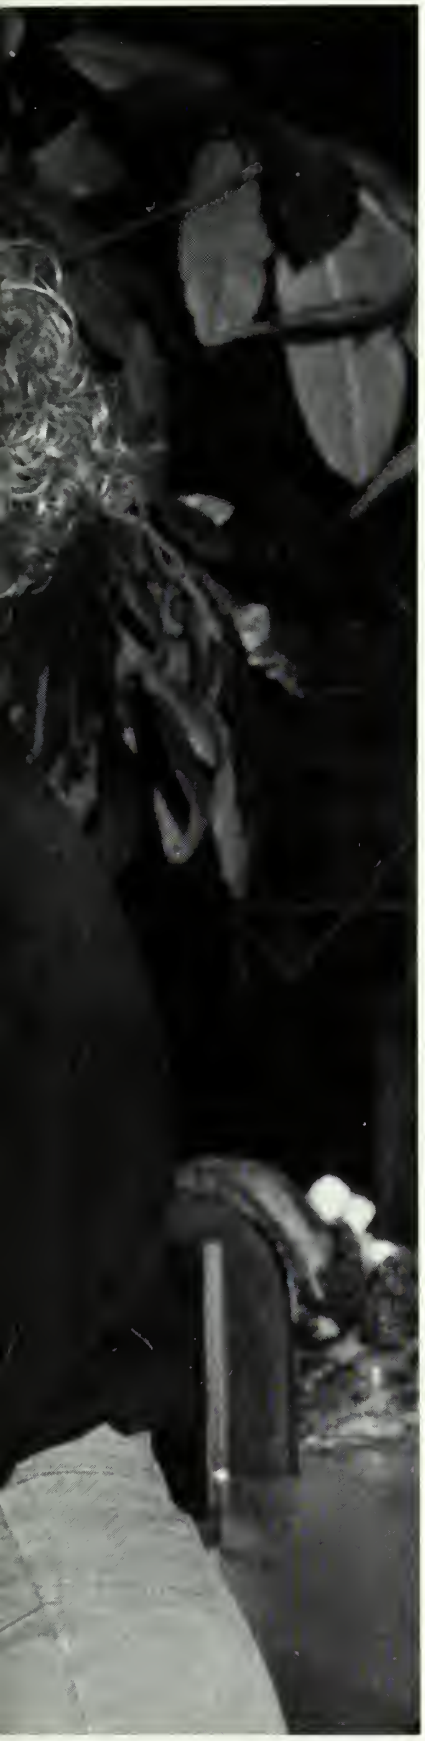
(I could tell you it was La Jolla, but there's no way to rhyme it without making it bore ya.)
The trees were all gone, except for a seed,
But maybe one seed will be all that we need.
There's one thing we know about our Dr. Seuss:
If he writes us a sequel, that'll really be news



ADS

Above: Who has been responsible for the rash of ice cream stealings? "Not I," says Jen Hagen.



Money Talks

The 1992 business staff began campaigning for ads soon after school finished last June. This long process was completed six months later when all the money had finally been collected and all of the student ad pictures had been taken. This vital section of the yearbook is mainly composed of ads from local Melrose merchants, however, groups of students are able to purchase ads, giving them an opportunity to have their picture taken with all of their friends in the yearbook. In exchange for a page in the yearbook, the financial contributions mainly guarantee successful production of the yearbook for the Classs of 1992, but also the benefit the businesses as well. All the students at Melrose High School, as well as others who read the book, patronize their stores resulting in a relationship of mutual support.

On behalf of the entire senior class and all of the underclassmen, the members of the yearbook staff would like to extend their great appreciation to all of the supporters of the 1992 Log whose advertisements grace the pages of our yearbook.
